UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly slapped Portugal again Tuesday night with landslide approval of an Asian-African demand for an end to repression in Angola and an immediate start toward independence for that West African colony.

The assembly approved the resolution by a 99-2 vote with one abstention. The stinging rebuke to Portugal aroused speculation if dictator Antonio Salazar would out his threat to quit the world body Portugal joined six years ago.

Only Spain and South Africa voted against the Asian-African resolution, which was approved after more than two weeks of debate marked by heated denunciations of Portugal's policies. France was the sole abstainer.

The only consolation for Portugal was the defeat of a much tougher Communist proposal to condemn Salazar's colonial policy and call on the Security Council for punitive action. This resolution was defeated 26-43 with 32 abstentions.

The Security Council scheduled debate Thursday afternoon on the dispute between India and Pakistan over Kashmir. The council may agree to hear a speech by Sir Zafulla Khan, Pakistan's chief delegate, but it then is expected to adjourn the debate until after the Indian elections in February so India's usual spokesman, Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon, can be present.

Fight Sends Two Persons to Hospital

A fight between a Negro man and a white insurance salesman late yesterday on North Laurel Street is under investigation, Chief of Police Jack Brown said today. Brown said a Hot Springs insurance man, G. N. Walter, was cut about the head with a soft drink bottle and that Henry King may have a collapsed lung. Both are in a local hospital under treatment.

The chief said Walter told him that King was one of his customers and had called him about taking out more insurance. When he made out the policy, Walter told Mr. Brown that King walked to the back of the upstairs living quarters, broke a bottle, came out and attacked him with it. The men fought through the door and fell about 15 feet to the ground from the head of the outside stairway, Mr. Brown said.

Both were taken to a local hospital by a Herndon-Cornelius ambulance. Chief Brown said that no charges have been filed pending completion of the investigation.

Bob Jackson of Hope was a guest and Gene White, a former member, re-joined the club.

Two Members of Circus Troupe Killed

DETROIT (AP) — Two members of the famed Wallendas family troupe were killed Tuesday night when three of the performers fell while doing their dizzying act on a circus high wire.

A crowd of 7,000 children and adults gasped in horror as the three men plummeted from the slender wire.

Three other male performers saved themselves and the only woman in the act by clinging to the swaying wire about 40 feet above a concrete coliseum floor.

Dieter Schepp, 23, and Richard Faughnan, 29, were injured fatally in the plunge.

Mario Wallenda, 22 also fell. His condition was described as "very critical" by a physician. Dieter's sister, Jana, 17, also was injured. Others of the troupe, clinging to the wire, caught her as she fell.

Those who managed to grab the wire and hold on were Herman Wallenda, 60, Karl Wallenda, 57, and Gunther Wallenda, 42, descendants in a family which has kept the troupe's name before the public for nearly 90 years.

They caught Miss Schepp and then dropped her into an improvised net.

The injured were rushed to nearby Highland Park General hospital, where Faughnan was dead of a skull fracture. Schepp died early today.

The tragedy which marred a long and illustrious performing history came during the Shrine circus at the Michigan State fairgrounds Coliseum.

Dieter Schepp and his sister escaped together only a few months ago from behind the Iron Curtain in East Germany.

Faughnan was making his debut with the Wallendas.

The four younger men formed the base of a pyramid with their feet on the high wire. Karl and Herman Wallenda were standing on long rods which ran along the younger men's shoulders. Miss Schepp was seated on a chair on a rod on the older men's shoulders.

Suddenly the pyramid collapsed. Herman, Karl and Gunther Wallenda managed to stay

MRS. AUDREY COLE, blind since she was 13 years old, has just recently returned from Rochester, Mich., where she spent three weeks in a program of training and getting acquainted with Tippy. She appeared on the Lions Club program Monday at noon and told them of her experiences to and from Rochester and of the training course. She was, of course, accompanied to the meeting by Tippy.

Businesses Hit by Fire at Newport

NEWPORT, Ark. (AP) — Fire fanned by a strong wind, destroyed two business houses in downtown Newport and injured three firemen before being brought under control late Tuesday night.

A third firm suffered heavy smoke and water damage.

The firemen, each suffering from first degree burns, were hospitalized but were not believed seriously injured. They were Alan Monday, Don Stephens and Jimmy French.

Fire Chief Harry Bennish said the fire apparently started in the attic of the Lindsey Tire and Supply Co., and spread to the H. C. Hurley Grocery Store, destroying both buildings.

Stewart's Appliance and Furniture Co., adjacent to the tire store, was damaged by smoke and water.

No estimate of the damage was available but it was expected to run into several hundred thousand dollars.

Two explosions shortly after the fire broke out helped the fire spread and hampered fighting operations. Bennish said the explosions were believed to have been triggered by gas or gasoline in the tire store.

Testimony Ends on Two New Dams

MARSHALL, Ark. (AP) — Army Engineers began assimilation today of testimony gathered Tuesday in a four-hour hearing on the proposal to construct two dams on the Buffalo River.

About 1,000 persons attended the hearing, sponsored by the engineers to gain public sentiment on the controversial proposal.

Proponents of the dams, to be located at Lone Rock and Gilbert, maintain the construction will boost the economy of the area. Opponents claim the dams would not be beneficial to wildlife, are not needed for flood control and will mar the natural beauty of the Buffalo River area.

At the Tuesday hearing Tom Dearmore, editor of the Mountain Home Baxter Bulletin, said "the people in a county where the income is $553 per capita cannot have as their primary concern birds, flowers and people who like to camp in remote places."

William Apple of Little Rock, president of the Arkansas Wildlife Federation, urged creation of a national park in the area and said that in the next few years, 90,000,000 persons would live within a day's drive of the Buffalo.

Virtually the whole town of Marshall attended the meeting at some time during the day. Stores were closed for two hours and some school classes were dismissed to allow students to attend.

The engineers will send a feasibility report on the dams to Washington.

The National Park Service has made a study of the area for a possible national park. Results of the studies will not be known for several months.

Bids on Bank Work

Final Day to Buy Auto Tags

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Today is the final day for buying state license plates for passenger cars without suffering a penalty. State Revenue Department officials said a new record high in license sales is expected for the year. Starting Wednesday, delinquent license buyers will be charged an additional $3 for each 10 days until the penalty equals the license price.

Arkla Gas Rate Goes to High Court

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A group of protesting Arkansas cities took their fight against the $1.2 million rate increase of Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. to the Arkansas Supreme Court today.

They appealed to the high court from a Pulaski Circuit Court order upholding the Public Service Commission in allowing the annual rate boost.

The PSC order permitted an increase in the minimum monthly charge from $1.10 to $1.87.

The appeal was signed by the city attorneys of El Dorado, Pine Bluff and Benton.

In a separate move, the city of El Dorado filed a petition with the Public Service Commission attacking an "escalator clause" under which it said that Arkla had raised rates seven cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas since 1953.

The petition said the actual increase in the cost of purchased gas over the period was only 2.6 cents but that the city had never had an opportunity to present evidence challenging the increase.

El Dorado City Attorney J. V. Spencer asked that the commission set an early hearing date.

Think Co-ops Making a Big Mistake

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — A Mississippi chemical official told the Arkansas Conference on Co-operatives here Tuesday night that cooperatives were making serious mistakes in their method of inducing farmers to become shareholders.

Owen Cooper, president of the Mississippi Chemical Corp., Yazoo City, said it is a mistake to try and provide a "painless" way for farmers to become cooperative shareholders.

"It is my firm belief that American farmers will make additional investments of $100 million a year in cash in farmer-owned and controlled facilities provided farm leaders are wise enough to develop sound programs," Cooper said.

The conference ends today with speeches by Dr. John W. White, vice president for agriculture at the University of Arkansas; Waldo Fraiser of Little Rock, executive president of the Arkansas Farm Bureau; and Noel G. Sauer, with the Farm Credit Administration in Washington.

Fayetteville Road Project Dropped

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Highway Department temporarily dropped a $185,000 Fayetteville project from its long range road building program today.

Highway Director F. R. Oliver said there were some disagreements about proposed widening of a section of Highway 45 and the project was being delayed so property owners could settle these differences.

The Fayetteville project was included in an advance list of projects but was not included in the list approved by the Highway Commission today.

AF Has No Choice at Blytheville

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said today it has no alternative except to comply with local rules and law in the case of school attendance by children of Negro airmen at the Blytheville, Ark., Air Force base.

About a dozen Negro children go to a segregated school.

A spokesman, answering questions, said that the Air Force does not control funds provided for federal aid for schooling in the area nor does it have authority to build a school on the Blytheville base.

The Negro children travel about six miles to the segregated school, the Air Force said. A white school is located close to the Blytheville base.

Cuba Ousted But U. S. Policy Dealt a Blow

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

PUNTA DEL ETE, Uruguay (AP) — Twenty American nations unanimously condemned Cuba's Communist regime today, but the United States could muster only the necessary two-thirds majority for the vote directing the speedy expulsion of Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime from the councils of the inter-American family.

The biggest and most powerful nations in Latin America joined the United States by refusing to vote for the expulsion "without delay" of the Castro government from the Organization of American States and its various agencies. The vote was 14-1, with Cuba voting no and the go-slow bloc of Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Mexico, Bolivia and Ecuador abstaining.

The consensus at this hemispheric foreign ministers' conference was that the six nations had given the Kennedy administration a severe blow. The six contended that there presently exists no legal basis for expulsion of an OAS member and wanted to delay until such a legal basis could be created by amendment of the OAS treaty.

The blow was softened somewhat when the United States Latin-American allies solidly adopted a ringing declaration that Cuba's Marxist-Leninist government is incompatible with the inter-American system and Cuba's alignment with the Soviet bloc breaks hemispheric unity.

The foreign ministers, with the exception of Cuba, also lined up unanimously with the United States on three other resolutions that provided:

1. The most stinging denunciation of Communist intrusion in the Western world ever adopted by any inter-American body.

2. The expulsion of Cuba from the inter-American Defense Board. This was little more than a formality since the Castro government has been barred from the board's sensitive deliberations for the last 10 months.

3. A ringing endorsement of President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress program. The Latin Americans called the program the foundation for their nations' economic and social development on a self-help basis and the best weapon with which to combat communism and Castroite influences.

An embargo on arms trade between Cuba and the OAS members was carried 16-1, with Cuba voting no and Brazil, Chile, Ecuador and Bolivia abstaining. The resolution also directs the OAS Council to study the possibility of extending the embargo to other articles, especially those considered of strategic importance.

A resolution calling for defense against international communism was approved 19-1, with Cuba voting against and Bolivia abstaining. The resolution asks the OAS "to maintain all vigilance necessary" to prevent aggression, subversion or other dangers to peace and security and directs the OAS to create a special consultation committee to aid those nations which request assistance on security problems.

Jobless Rate Falls, So Does Employment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate fell to 5.8 per cent of the work force in January — the first time in 16 months it has dropped below 6 per cent.

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg announced that employment dropped by 1.4 million to 65,058,000 in January while unemployment increased by 572,000 to 4,663,000.

However both these changes were less than seasonally expected.

Employment usually declines in January due to post-Christmas lags, while unemployment increases because of the winter weather.

Actually the January employment total, while a drop from December, was a record for the month. The January idle total was 700,000 below the unemployment figure recorded in January 1961.

MARION, Ark. (AP) — A passenger train slammed into a stalled pickup truck near Marion today, killing three men.

Two were occupants of the truck. The third was struck by flying debris as he walked along the track.

A fourth man was injured by debris.

Injured was Rozelle Taylor, 44, a Negro also of Marion.

Johnson said Lawrence Wyatt of Thayer, Mo., engineer of the train, told him the truck apparently stalled at the grade crossing.

Johnson said that Stockley and Harris were apparently killed instantly.

Davidson died on route to a West Memphis hospital.

Johnson said Taylor told him he and Harris were walking together and that when he saw the truck stalled he ran to warn Stockley.

Would Slice Billion Off of Program

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy sent a tough new farm program to Congress today which would give the nation's farmers this choice: accept much tighter production controls on surplus products or face a cut-off of most federal price supports and other aid.

Kennedy said in a special message that his proposals are designed to slice an estimated $5 billion off farm programs over the next four years. The programs otherwise would cost more than $12 billion during that period.

Additional aims are to boost farm income and reduce costly farm surpluses now in government hands, he said.

Farmers growing wheat, corn, oats, barley and sorghum grains would lose all price supports if they did not go along with acreage allotments and marketing quotas set under the new program. In addition, the government would reserve the right to dump huge amounts of these surplus grains on the markets. Under most conditions this would depress prices.

Marketing quotas would be set on all farm products for the first time if the program is approved.

The new Kennedy program is the toughest proposed by a president since federal controls were introduced into agriculture in the 1930s.

In the past farmers were asked to cut production of surplus items or perhaps lose some of their price supports. Now it's a case of cut surplus production or get practically no aid.

The more rigid controls highlighted what Kennedy described as his "A B C D" farm program for the 1960s — abundance, balance, conservation and development.

He said the program is built around maximum use of the nation's food abundance while balancing future production with needs, conserving farm resources and developing low-income rural areas.

The tighter controls would be applied, in the beginning, to the three big surplus products—wheat, feed grains and dairy products. They would require approval by at least two-thirds of the producers voting in three separate referendums.

Briefly, here are the programs proposed for these products:

Wheat—Reductions of possibly as much as 20 per cent in the years immediately ahead in acreage allotments and marketing quotas from the 1961 level. Growers will get a somewhat higher price support for grain used for food in the domestic market and a lower one for wheat sold for export. All wheat now is under the same support level.

Should the program be rejected, the government would withdraw all supports and reserve the right to dump up to 200 million bushels of its surplus grain on markets. The government could, if it saw fit, make payments on land diverted from wheat. The present program provides for supports, but at a reduced level, if controls are turned down.

The Road to the Snail

CHAPTER XXXIII
Adam Barn stood up in the front row and popped a flashbulb in the senator's face. He had a necklace of shiny cameras slung around his neck, in addition to the huge telescopic lens he was training on the senator like a siege gun.
"Chin up a little, sir," he said, hopping lightly around for another shot at him.
"Who're these pictures for?" Axelson said sharply.
"NEA, sir. Sorry to put you off stride. There's that better." Senator Axelson flattened his lips in a smile and fingered his tie. "Well, all right. Want one from the other side?"
"No thank you, sir," Adam said down and began scribbling in a notebook.
"I'll continue then," Axelson leaned forward and traced his hands on the table. "These men have given the Russians a sword to point at our throats in the propaganda war. American soldiers and construction workers on foreign soil must have clearly defined limits of activity. Limits defined and spelled out by contract. We have such contracts with countries all around the world. They are vital to peace. Our troops, civilian workers and technicians must hew strictly to the line of the contract. We've given the Russians the opportunity to say—and what's more prove—that we've treated our contract with Spain as nothing more than a whimsical scrap of paper.
"I have heard some talk of a miracle. I needn't point out that the United States Senate does not investigate miracles." The senator smiled frostily.
"We've been accused of establishing rather wide areas of authority for ourselves, but I can assure you we don't extend those to matters of Divine intervention."
An aide handed him a note.
"Thank you," The senator nodded shortly. "For the record, let me say the British government has agreed to accept the recommendations of this committee in regard to her nationals involved. Our action is coordinated. We do not intend to let the Russian charges—"
"Precisely, precisely," Commodore Shapely said in a loud, firm voice, and rose to his feet. "Charges! There was the nub of the thing. You were merely a scapgoat, General Shuyler."
"Just a minute—"
"You set your blasts perfectly, always maintained, lined up your charges according to the resistance we expected on that gradient." The Commodore strode briskly down the aisle and gave Senator Axelson an encouraging whack on the back.
The senator's aides were crowding protectively around Axelson. "Never fear, the general won't bolt," the Commodore said, waving them away imperiously. "No handcuffs and leg irons for old soldiers."
The Commodore strode back down the garden. "Shame to bound a man that way," I heard him say, as he disappeared into the Bar Central.
Francesca was laughing helplessly. The rest of us were trying to smother our giggling. Axelson brought his gavel down with a crash. "I don't know who that idiot is, but I want this noise to stop!"
Adam flashed a bulb in his face.
Polly Soames turned around and poked my leg. "On my word, that is Acorns Axelson. He plowed up that football field the night after his team lost to State. Got thrown out of college for it. Acorns had promise as a youngster. Shame what's happened to him, isn't it?"
The senator brought the hearing back to order with his gavel, and with his cold, cheerless eye. "Let me give you a couple of facts to show you this is no laughing matter," he said. "The Russian line is this: The Americans go into other countries with pious talk. Define their activity by contract, and so forth. But once they're in they do what they please. The lesson is simple—don't let them in. That's the story they're beaming all over the world."
"Well, we're answering it. We're going to show the world we respect our agreements with other nations. That we discipline anyone who violates those contracts. And further, we're going to show the American taxpayer that his money is being sensibly spent on guns and planes and missiles. Not on whimsical, unauthorized projects like this road to the snail."
Dennis sighed. "We're proper criminals, aren't we?"
"Bite the bullet," I said. "Here comes the ax."
"Therefore, I'll give you the decision of this committee," Axelson said.
But there was a commotion in the rear of the garden at this point. Simple Simon came hurrying out the back of the Bar Central waving his arms frantically. As he trotted down the aisle toward Senator Axelson, his bull-fighter's cape and long monk's robe fluttered behind him like agitated pennants.

Proposes the Issuance of UN Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy asked Congress today for $100 million to buy United Nations bonds and help bail the U.N. out of its Congo-caused financial crisis.
In a strongly worded message, Kennedy declared the bond purchase is vital to U.S. interests. Failure to buy the securities, he said, "would serve the interests of the Soviet Union."
The presidential plea has already run into controversy on Capitol Hill and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, has promised hearings before any vote is taken.
House Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts predicted, however, that the legislators will approve Kennedy's request. He told newsmen "I feel very confident that Congress will realize the importance of it and will act favorably on it."
The debate appears likely to range over the whole question of this country's role in the U.N.
The President in his state of the Union message, said purchase of the bonds "will not only keep the United Nations solvent, but require all voting members to pay their fair share of activities."
The proposed bond issue, totaling $200 million, is to be retired out of general assessments, which all U.N. members pay. The money is required to pay debts arising from U.N. Congo operations. Several nations, notably the Soviet Union, France and Belgium, have refused to pay special assessments for the operations.

Expect Delay on Colonial Issue Debate

By TOM HOGE
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —The Western Allies were expected to try to postpone Security Council debate today on Soviet trying to block U.N. efforts to return Katanga Province to the control of the central Congo government.
The council was summoned into urgent session at the Soviet Union's request, but informants said the United States and other Western Allies would seek to adjourn debate at least until Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula arrives in New York later this week.
Informants predicted that Soviet delegate Valerian Zorin would try during the preliminary discussion to air his charges that Katanga President Moise Tshombe is ignoring council demands that he rid his army of mercenaries and end secession of his province. Zorin has accused colonial powers of abetting Tshombe in such action.
A U.S. spokesman said the United States feels council debate unnecessary at this time. He charged Zorin had demanded the meeting to confuse the situation.
Adoula has notified Council President Sir Patrick Dean of Britain that he opposes a meeting now on grounds "it can only create confusion and damage the interests of the Congolese people." Adoula criticized Zorin for seeking the meeting and expressed regret action had been taken before the Leopoldville government was consulted.
A 20-nation conference of African nations meeting in Lagos, Nigeria, also urged the council to avoid any action "likely to jeopardize the present good prospects for a solution to the Congo problem."
Informants said Zorin has been trying with little success to persuade African states not on the council to take part in the debate.

Teacher Refuses Pledge to Flag

UTICA, Mich. (AP)—A teacher who refused to direct his students to sing the national anthem or to pledge allegiance to the flag will not have his contract renewed.
The Utica Board of Education voted Monday night not to renew the contract of Charles McManigal, 27, a teacher at Sterling Junior High School.
McManigal said that as a Jehovah's Witness, he looked upon the flag as an idol and could not take part in the pledge or in singing the anthem.

DOROTHY DIX

Headstrong Teen-Agers Thought They Knew Best

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE
Dear Helen: At 19, I'm a bitter, disillusioned wife and mother. Two long years ago — it seems ages. I met a boy at our high school prom — good looking (the other girls were crazy about him), an easy talker and swell dancer. I've naturally curly yellow hair and blue eyes. Mama bought me a cornflower blue chiffon dinner dress for the party. The boy said I was pretty. It was love at first sight. I couldn't live without him, nor he without me. Neither his folks nor mine were keen about our getting married, we made such a fuss that they finally gave their consent, I being only 17 and he just 19. He had a job but it didn't pay much so my parents helped out.

After the excitement of the wedding in our church with all the trimmings: white satin bridal gown, coronet veil and bridesmaids dressed in blue — my favorite color; we settled down to life on cloud nine. It was just that till the baby came 10 months later. Then my husband began staying out all hours, drinking heavily and picking arguments with me. On several occasions I saw him with other girls — being the same old charmer he was when we met. Now he's lost his job, bills are piling up and still he continues his infantile way of life. He has no respect for my parents who've done so much for us both, nor for me, anymore. I feel as if I were wasting my life on something that could never be, no matter how hard I try to hold our marriage together. What shall I do? — Desperate Wife.

Dear Desperate: This defeatist attitude will get you nowhere. If you are ever going to amount to anything in this world or the next, do your best to solve each problem as it arises. This present one involves the success of your marriage, the welfare of your child. What could be more important?

Drinking, chasing the girls, keeping down patrol hours are only manifestations of your husband's immaturity. Help him grow up. Believe in him, encourage him to try for work he likes and, if he is not qualified, make every sacrifice to equip him. Since his parents and yours gave their consent to your marriage, they might go a step further and underwrite his education in the field of his choice. You could study home making at the same time. The joy of life lies in the doing. Happy parents mean a happy family. Don't be a quitter! See this problem in the large!

Dear Helen: I am 18 and live at home because I have to. Papa drinks and Mama's a wreck trying to keep him straight and make ends meet. I quit high school in my second year to sing with a band and help out at home. I've the kind of husky, throaty voice that makes a good blues singer. Now, out of a clear sky, I've got a really lucky break. The kids are going to play in Los Angeles and want me as the featured singer.

My problem is Mom. How can I leave her alone with Dad? He's a holy terror when on a binge. To make matters worse, my boy friend who's in the Army, doesn't like the idea of my going to Los Angeles. For me, it's the chance of a lifetime. Help! — Mixed Up.

Dear Mixed Up: Take Mom along. If the band can afford to pay your expenses, it can pay hers too. Give her a whirl. Show Pop that you two can do very well without him. The shock may bring him to his senses.

Dear Helen: I once did something wrong and certain people still hate me for it. So far I've been able to keep the truth from my husband and children but I live in constant fear of them finding out. For this reason I never appear in public with my husband. Now, I may lose him. He says if I continued to stay at home he will find another girl. I am 29, he thinks I look it and more. How can I handle this problem which is eating at my

Africans Ask Freedom at Once

By ROBERT N. LINDSAY

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The Lagos summit conference of 20 African nations has called for freeing of all dependent territories at the earliest possible date.

Without setting a target date the group decided to take "concrete and immediate measures to boycott economically and diplomatically" all foreign powers which do not cooperate.

This was announced today in communiques reporting on resolutions unanimously approved during the five-day meeting, which ended Tuesday.

The 20 states reaffirmed their belief in the "inalienable right of all peoples to self-determination."

They rejected the "claim of any power exercising colonial trust, or rule, over any territory in Africa or elsewhere that such territory is an integral part of its homeland."

The declaration is aimed principally at Portugal.

The group decided to form an association of African states, with an assembly and council of ministers, to promote unity and protect freedom.

The unguided missile was hurled, unintentionally, by an explosion in an apartment house. The blast was attributed to probable leaking gas.

HERBERT BURNS

The Road to the Snail

by WILLIAM P. McGUIVERN

CHAPTER XXXIII

Adam Barn stood up in the front row and popped a flashbulb in the senator's face. He had a necklace of shiny cameras slung around his neck, in addition to the huge telescopic lens he was training on the senator like a siege gun.

"Chin up a little, sir," he said, hopping lightly around for another shot at him.

"Who're these pictures for?" Axelson said sharply.

"NFA, sir. Sorry to put you off stride. There's that better." Senator Axelson flattened his lips in a smile and fingered his tie. "Well, all right. Want one from the other side?"

"No thank you, sir," Adam said down and began scribbling in a notebook.

"I'll continue then," Axelson leaned forward and traced his hands on the table. "These men have given the Russians a sword to point at our threats in the propaganda war. American soldiers and construction workers on foreign soil must have clearly defined limits of activity. Limits defined and spelled out by contract. We have such contracts with countries all around the world. They are vital to peace. Our troops, civilian workers and technicians must hew strictly to the line of the contract. We've given the Russians the opportunity to say—and what's more prove—that we've treated our contract with Spain as nothing more than a whimsical scrap of paper.

"I have heard some talk of a miracle. I needn't point out that the United States Senate does not investigate miracles." The senator smiled frostily.

"We've been accused of establishing rather wide areas of authority for ourselves, but I can assure you we don't extend those to matters of Divine intervention."

An aide handed him a note.

"Thank you," the senator nodded shortly. "For the record, let me say the British government has agreed to accept the recommendations of this committee in regard to her nationals involved. Our action is coordinated. We do not intend to let the Russian charges—"

"Precisely, precisely," Commodore Shapely said in a loud, firm voice, and rose to his feet. "Charges! There was the nub of the thing. You were merely a scapegoat, General Shuyler."

"Just a minute—"

"You set your blasts perfectly, I always maintained, lined up your charges according to the resistance we expected on that gradient." The Commodore strode briskly down the aisle and gave Senator Axelson an encouraging whack on the back.

The senator's aides were crowding protectively around Axelson.

"Never fear, the general won't bolt," the Commodore said, waving them away imperiously. "No handcuffs and leg irons for old soldiers."

The Commodore strode back down the garden. "Shame to hound a man that way," I heard him say, as he disappeared into the Bar Central.

Francesca was laughing helplessly. The rest of us were trying to smother our giggling.

Axelson brought his gavel down with a crash. "I don't know who that idiot is, but I want this noise to stop!"

Adam flashed a bulb in his face.

Polly Soames turned around and poked my leg. "On my word, that is Axelson. He plowed up that football field the night after his team lost to State. Got thrown out of college for it. Axelson had promise as a youngster. Shame what's happened to him, isn't it?"

The senator brought the hearing back to order with his gavel, and with his cold, cheerless eye.

"Let me give you a couple of facts to show you this is no laughing matter," he said. "The Russian line is this: The Americans go into other countries with pious talk. Define their activity by contract, and so forth. But once they're in they do what they please. The lesson is simple—don't let them in. That's the story they're beaming all over the world."

"Well, we're answering it. We're going to show the world we respect our agreements with other nations. That we discipline anyone who violates those contracts. And further, we're going to show the American taxpayer that his money is being sensibly spent on guns and planes and missiles. Not on whimsical, unauthorized projects like this road to the snail."

Dennis sighed. "We're proper criminals, aren't we?"

"Bite the bullet," I said. "Here comes the ax."

"Therefore, I'll give you the decision of this committee," Axelson said.

But there was a commotion in the rear of the garden at this point. Simple Simon came hurrying out the back of the Bar Central waving his arms frantically. As he trotted down the aisle toward Senator Axelson, his bull-fighter's cape and long monk's robe fluttered behind him like agitated pennants.

Proposes the Issuance of UN Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy asked Congress today for $100 million to buy United Nations bonds and help bail the U.N. out of its Congo-caused financial crisis.

In a strongly worded message, Kennedy declared the bond purchase is vital to U.S. interests. Failure to buy the securities, he said, "would serve the interests of the Soviet Union."

The presidential plea has already run into controversy on Capitol Hill and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, has promised hearings before any vote is taken.

House Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts predicted, however, that the legislators will approve Kennedy's request. He told newsmen "I feel very confident that Congress will realize the importance of it and will act favorably on it."

The debate appears likely to range over the whole question of this country's role in the U.N.

The President in his state of the Union message, said purchase of the bonds "will not only keep the United Nations solvent, but require all voting members to pay their fair share of activities."

The proposed bond issue, totaling $200 million, is to be retired out of general assessments, which all U.N. members pay. The money is required to pay debts arising from U.N. Congo operations. Several nations, notably the Soviet Union, France and Belgium, have refused to pay special assessments for the operations.

Several congressmen have said they are opposed to the bond purchase and to the U.N. military actions on behalf of the Congo central government, accused warmly backed by the Kennedy administration.

The Senate African Affairs subcommittee, headed by Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., has been holding closed hearings this month on U.S. support of the U.N. military campaign against President Moise Tshombe of the secessionist Katanga Province.

Since the United Nations was founded, the United States has contributed about $1.2 billion of the $2.7 billion spent. However, administration spokesmen note that the U.S. share has declined proportionately as new members were admitted.

Expect Delay on Colonial Issue Debate

By TOM HOGE

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Western Allies were expected to try to postpone Security Council debate today on Soviet efforts to block U.N. efforts to return Katanga Province to the control of the central Congo government.

The council was summoned into urgent session at the Soviet Union's request, but informants said the United States and other Western Allies would seek to adjourn debate at least until Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula arrives in New York later this week.

Informants predicted that Soviet delegate Valerian Zorin would try during the preliminary discussion to air his charges that Katanga President Moise Tshombe is ignoring council demands that he rid his army of mercenaries and end secession of his province. Zorin has accused colonial powers of abetting Tshombe in such action.

A U.S. spokesman said the United States feels council debate unnecessary at this time. He charged Zorin had demanded the meeting to confuse the situation.

Adoula has notified Council President Sir Patrick Dean of Britain that he opposes a meeting now on grounds "it can only create confusion and damage the interests of the Congolese people."

Adoula criticized Zorin for seeking the meeting and expressed regret action had been taken before the Leopoldville government

Teacher Refuses Pledge to Flag

UTICA, Mich. (AP)—A teacher who refused to direct his students to sing the national anthem or to pledge allegiance to the flag will not have his contract renewed.

The Utica Board of Education voted Monday night not to renew the contract of Charles McManigal, 27, a teacher at Sterling Junior High School.

McManigal said that as a Jehovah's Witness, he looked upon the flag as an idol and could not take part in the pledge or in singing the anthem.

An adult grizzly bear breaks his winter fast with grass, but soon goes on to harder fare.

was consulted.

A 20-nation conference of African nations meeting in Lagos, Nigeria, also urged the council to avoid any action "likely to jeopardize the present good prospects for a solution to the Congo problem."

Informants said Zorin has been trying with little success to persuade African states not on the council to take part in the debate.

DOROTHY DIX

Headstrong Teen-Agers Thought They Knew Best

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: At 19, I'm a bitter, disillusioned wife and mother. Two long years ago — it seems ages, I met a boy at our high school prom — good looking (the other girls were crazy about him), an easy talker and swell dancer. I've naturally curly yellow hair and blue eyes. Mama bought me a cornflower-blue chiffon dinner dress for the party. The boy said I was pretty. It was love at first sight. I couldn't live without him, nor he without me. Neither his folks nor mine were keen about our getting married, we made such a fuss that they finally gave their consent. I being only 17 and he just 19. He had a job but it didn't pay much so my parents helped out.

After the excitement of the wedding in our church with all the trimmings: white satin bridal gown, coronet veil and bridesmaids dressed in blue — my favorite color; we settled down to life on cloud nine. It was just that till the baby came 10 months later. Then my husband began staying out all hours, drinking heavily and picking arguments with me.

On several occasions I saw him with other girls — being the same old charmer he was when we met. Now he's lost his job, bills are piling up and still he continues his infantile way of life. He has no respect for my parents who've done so much for us both, nor for me, anymore.

I feel as if I were wasting my life on something that could never be, no matter how hard I try to hold our marriage together. What shall I do? — Desperate Wife.

Dear Desperate: This defeatist attitude will get you nowhere. If you are ever going to amount to anything in this world or the next, do your best to solve each problem as it arises. This present one involves the success of your marriage, the welfare of your child. What could be more important?

Drinking, chasing the girls, keeping dawn patrol hours are only manifestations of your husband's immaturity. Help him grow up. Believe in him, encourage him to try for work he likes and, if he is not qualified, make every sacrifice to equip him.

Since his parents and yours gave their consent to your marriage, they might go a step further and underwrite his education in the field of his choice. You could study home making at the same time. The joy of life lies in the doing. Happy parents mean a happy family. Don't be a quitter. See this problem in the large!

Dear Helen: I am 18 and live at home because I have to. Papa drinks and Mama's a wreck trying to keep him straight and make ends meet. I quit high school in my second year to sing with a band and help out at home.

I've the kind of husky, throaty voice that makes a good blues singer. Now, out of a clear sky, I've got a really lucky break. The kids are going to play in Los Angeles and want me as the featured singer.

My problem is Mom. How can I leave her alone with Dad? He's a holy terror when on a binge. To make matters worse, my boy friend who's in the Army, doesn't like the idea of my going to Los Angeles. For me, it's the chance of a lifetime. Help! — Mixed Up.

Dear Mixed Up: Take Mom along. If the band can afford to pay your expenses, it can pay hers too. Give her a whirl. Show Pop that you two can do very well without him. The shock may bring him to his senses.

Dear Helen: I once did something wrong and certain people still hate me for it. So far I've been able to keep the truth from my husband and children but I live in constant fear of them finding out. For this reason I never appear in public with my husband. Now, I may lose him. He says if I continued to stay at home he will find another girl. I am 29, he thinks I look it and more. How can I handle this problem which is eating at my
